Russians Would Withdraw If
U. S., British Pull Men
Out Of Italy

PARIS, May 14—Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov offered today to withdraw Russian troops from Bulgaria if the United States and Great Britain would pull theirs out of Italy.

Secretary of State James F. Byrnes proposed that the big four foreign ministers start discussions of a peace treaty with Austria. Molotov vetoed the proposal.

The council of ministers was in plenary session for two hours and a half.

Refuse To Make Deal
Byrnes and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain refused to make a deal for the withdrawal of allied troops from Italy in exchange for a Russian evacuation of Bulgaria.

The council discussed a report by experts on the Franco-Italian frontier, but took up none of the major issues of the Italian treaty. Noticeably jaded after nearly three weeks of talking, the ministers today made one more attempt to reach agreement on Italy before taking up the future of Germany tomorrow. They planned to review the whole Italian field without limiting themselves to specific agenda items.

Molotov Determined
The only real basis for optimism in the involved and often repetitious negotiations appeared to be that neither Russia nor the western powers wanted to take responsibility for admitting that the conference had failed. All the participants seemed grimly determined not to give up while a faint prospect of success remained.

Some quarters saw the possibility that the meeting might run into next week.

IOWANS LINE UP FOR BREAD TO GO WITH BUTTER

RIVALING THE EASTERN BUTTER LINES, residents of Des Moines, Ia., are in bread lines like the one above, formed when a shortage of pastry goods hit the city due to a strike of 250 members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers local union. The strike started after the A. F. of L. bakers demanded a 25-cent-an-hour wage boost, and the bakeries offered 7 cents.

Near Riot Results When
2,000 Stage Sitdown
Strike At Palace

TOKYO, May 14—A near-riot occurred this afternoon at the east gate of the imperial palace when more than 2,000 Japanese, some of them women carrying babies strapped to their backs, staged a five-hour sitdown strike demanding more food.

The demonstrators, many of whom waved red flags, demanded an answer from Emperor Hirohito to their demands Sunday which included the release of allegedly hoarded foodstocks of the imperial household.

Palace guards forcibly turned back a special committee of 25 women who attempted to force their way through the east gate to press their demands for milk for their babies.

It was the second time in three days that demonstrations brought their demands for food to the gates of the imperial palace. Sunday a crowd of more than 1,000 forced their way past the guards and held a rally in front of the imperial household department office.

The demands also included establishment of a democratic government in order to "relieve the people who are on the verge of starvation."

When police refused to open the gate today and began pushing the women back, a number of male demonstrators surged in around them, threateningly.

One police captain became engaged in a scuffle with several demonstrators, but a more serious outbreak was averted by other armed palace guards who rushed to the scene.

Long Bread Shortage Predicted By Miller

CHICAGO, May 14—About 23 days' supply of flour stands between American housewives and a bread shortage of unforeseeable duration and intensity, a spokesman for one of the nation's largest mills estimated today.

The spokesman, attending the Millers' National Federation convention, asked to remain anonymous "for business reasons."

"My customers—the flourmen—might not like such optimistic statements about flour stocks," he said. "But trade reports indicate there must be 20 to 25 days flour on the shelves of wholesalers and retailers."

"But," he said, "there won't be much more where that came from." He pointed to an announcement by a Millers National Federation official that most of the nation's 2,500 flour mills would be closed for lack of wheat by June 1.

Harvesting of the new wheat crop will begin in mid-June, he said, but only southwestern mills will get immediate relief. "And, maybe it won't be immediate. There's no government bonus on the new crop. Suppose the farmer holds onto his wheat hoping for another price ceiling increase?"

The spokesman said "nobody—not even the government—can predict" how severe the bread shortage will be.

"It will be spotty," he said. "Some sections will be hit worse than others. Some areas may not be affected."

The farmer is the key to the entire picture, he said. "If he continues to hold out, the bread shortage will be worse."

Three youths were sentenced to the Ohio State Reformatory at Mansfield and six other persons were released on probation, Tuesday, by Judge Emmitt L. Crist in Pickaway County Common Pleas court. The nine were among those indicted May 8 by the county grand jury.

Judge Crist signed an entry committing Kay Chaffin, 60, Walnut Creek pike, to the Columbus State hospital for a sanity examination. Chaffin, under indictment for arson in connection with a fire Easter Sunday that caused several hundred dollars damage to his rented home, Monday entered a formal plea of not guilty. The commitment to the Columbus institution for mental examination was at the request of his lawyer. The order says the examination shall cover a period not to exceed 20 days.

Bliss Sentenced
Charles F. Bliss, 20, Route 2, Circleville, was sentenced to a term of one to 20 years in Mansfield on his plea of guilty to an indictment charging operation of a motor vehicle without the owner's consent. Bliss was arrested April 27 following a bullet-punctured chase in U. S. Route 23 by Sgt. W. E. Arey and Cpl. Max Lambert of the State Highway Patrol when Bliss was driving back to Circleville from Chillicothe in a pickup truck he had stolen in Circleville earlier that night. The vehicle was the property of the firm of Harpster and Yost.

The bulk of 400,000 striking mine workers were back at their jobs today, and prospects appeared brighter that the two-week coal truce might become permanent.

Except for some 80,000 miners in the soft coal fields of Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Alabama, strikers returned to the pits promptly under orders from United Mine Workers (AFL) President John L. Lewis. They were joined in a similar truce arrangement by 18,000 striking members of the Progressive Mine Workers union in Illinois.

Limited coal supplies began moving almost immediately, under government priority orders, to utilities, railroads, hospitals and food processors. Other industries will be allowed coal after essential users have been supplied.

Research, Strong Air Force Being Planned In Army Reorganization

WASHINGTON, May 14—The war department said today that its first major reorganization since 1942 will streamline the Army, reduce costs, decentralize supervisory operations and put the emphasis where it belongs—on research and a strong air force.

Maj. Gen. F. L. Parks, director of war department public relations, said the Army had to reorganize itself to cope with a reduction in its strength from a wartime peak of 8,000,000 to 1,550,000.

The reorganization goes into effect June 11. It was authorized by an executive order signed by President Truman.

Parks explained that the present organization of the war department was formed to fight a global war. But the emphasis now is placed on the two-fold job of preparing the nation to protect itself and occupying Germany and Japan.

Under the plan, scientific research and development policies will be centered directly under control of the secretary of war. He will be assisted by an advisory board of leading scientists, technicians and industrialists.

DRAFT DUE TO EXPIRE TONIGHT

Senate Must Approve House
Amendments Today If
Law Survives

WASHINGTON, May 14—Administration leaders scrambled madly today to save the draft law scheduled to expire at midnight unless the senate accepts house amendments to an extension bill.

A senate-passed bill for a 45-day, stop-gap extension won house approval last night, but only after the house tacked on amendments to ban drafting of teen-agers and fathers.

These changes sent the issue back to the senate for eleventh-hour action. If the senate fails to accept the house amendments, there hardly seems time for a senate-house conference to iron out differences.

The senate is committed to consider later legislation, and it was not certain that it would agree even to vote on the draft bill.

House administration leaders said the two amendments adopted by the house virtually killed effectiveness of the draft anyway. So many groups of men have been exempted from peace-time service that the teen-agers remain virtually the only profitable field for the draft boards.

The 45-day draft extension without any exemption for teen-agers would have caught 80,000 high school and college youths who have been deferred until the end of school terms this Spring, selective service officials estimated.

The house adopted the amendment exempting teen-agers and fathers by a vote of 213 to 154. (Continued on Page Two)

BOWLES WOULD SUGGEST NEW FOOD PROGRAM

Hoover Sounds Warning In Report That Many
Face Starvation

WASHINGTON, May 14—Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles said today he will recommend a return to rationing if it appears rationing is necessary to assure equitable distribution of our food supply at home and to meet foreign relief commitments.

He mentioned meat, dairy products and possibly bread among items which might be rationed.

Bowles told a news conference he felt "we should go ahead with rationing if practical requirements call for it," but emphasized "I certainly hope it can be avoided."

OPA officials were reported today to believe that the United States must make an early decision on whether to resume food rationing.

If bread is rationed, it would be the first time such action has been taken in this country.

Rationing powers are contained in the second war powers act which is scheduled to expire June 30. Extension legislation is pending in congress. Bowles said he hoped congress would soon extend the act.

He repeatedly emphasized that rationing would result in a fairer domestic distribution of food supplies if relief shipments abroad drain off much of the normal supply at home.

He noted that some people will oppose a return to rationing on grounds of "to hell with Europe and Asia, I want my steak."

Bowles denied that the administration would use rationing as a means of publicizing famine abroad. He added, however, that if this country does not do its full share to help feed hungry people overseas "I am sure we will regret it."

Other food developments:
1. Sen. Clyde M. Reed, R., Kans., predicted American housewives would be "pinched for bread" within 30 days unless millers were permitted to compete with the government in buying wheat.

2. An agriculture department spokesman said it was planned all along for millers to run out of flour. He said this would force bakers to fall back on their inventories, freeing more wheat for export. He said most bakers had flour for a month or more.

3. Mr. Hoover scheduled a meeting today with the President's famine emergency committee, presumably to outline the "more vigorous" voluntary food saving steps necessary for the United States to meet the present short-range food crisis.

4. Rep. Thomas A. Jenkins, R., O., said rationing may be necessary because the administration failed to increase food production. He said rationing would not increase food production. (Continued on Page Two)

ICELAND TROOPS UNDER FIRE BY MOSCOW AGAIN

LONDON, May 14—The Moscow radio renewed its attacks on American forces in Iceland today, claiming that the island republic never could be entirely independent while they remained.

"The United States continues to insist that it be granted long term military bases," a Moscow broadcast in English said.

The commentator said the United States had ignored Iceland's repeated representations that the forces be withdrawn in accordance with a treaty obligation. He recalled a recent statement by Premier Olafur Thors that Iceland could not grant the American request for postwar bases.

COLUMBUS, May 14—Maj. Gen. Robert Beightler will remain as commander of Fort Hayes, which will change on June 11 from the headquarters of the Fifth Service Command to a subordinate command post under a revamped Second Army, it was learned today.

Under the war department's reorganization plan, which does away with the nine service commands, the Army Area Command at Fort Hayes will control activities in Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and Indiana.

Gen. Beightler said his duties will be defined by the Commanding General of the Second Army, with headquarters at Baltimore. The new area command at Fort Hayes will supervise "activities of the reserve corps, the ROTC, recruiting and the revised National Guard" in addition to its old responsibilities, the general said.

'War Game' Is Fatal To Youth, 15

LANCASTER, Calif., May 14—Three teen-age boys told today how their hunting trip ended in a "war game" which killed their 15-year-old chum.

Cecil Graveline died of a .22-caliber rifle bullet in the head, apparently as a result of a "good-natured" five minute sham battle with his companions, pals since junior high school days.

His body was found behind a bush on the desert near here an hour after the "game."

William A. Felix, 17, whose 16-year-old wife, Barbara Ann, expects their first baby any minute, and Alfred J. Smith, 16, high school sophomore, were held on suspicion of murder.

James C. Helm, 15, who quit high school a week ago to get a job, was held in juvenile court. Four others in the party were not held.

Ballistics expert Sgt. J. G. Layne, who examined the rifles in the boys' camp, said the fatal shot came from a rifle fired by both Smith and Helm, who traded guns during the battle.

Officers said the eight youths left Los Angeles Saturday afternoon for their hunting trip and had their fatal battle after breakfast Sunday, before anyone had bagged a rabbit.

COAL PRICE IS 'X'; INCREASES TO BE PASSED ON

WASHINGTON, May 14—The wholesale price of coal is now "X." The OPA announced that anyone buying more than five tons of coal must pay the present ceiling price, and also agree to pay any additional amounts the OPA may add to the price tag.

This, said the OPA, will take care of any necessary retroactive coal price rise that results from the United Mine Workers' current negotiations for a retroactive pay increase.

Some quarters saw the possibility that the meeting might run into next week.

Molotov Determined

Molotov seemed as determined as the others to keep plowing ahead, although he usually faced at least an Anglo-American alignment against him. Frequently it was supported by the French. It was Molotov who balked yesterday when Byrnes suggested a change of pace by switching the discussion to Germany.

The ministers battled for four hours last yesterday and broke up without either side having yielded an inch on basic points.

Byrnes disclosed that he had instructed Lt. Gen. Lucius Clay to propose that the allied control commission for Germany appoint a committee to tour all four occupation zones and investigate the present state of German disarmament. Clay is the American member of the commission.

The move was a reply to Molotov's criticism, made when Byrnes proposed the 25-year disarmament treaty on Germany, that the allies should discuss German disarmament as it stood today, not a quarter century in the future.

The cases involved charges that officers and men were brutal to American military prisoners at the Army's 10th replacement depot stockade at Lichfield, England.

McNarney said that investigation made by Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, western area commander, revealed "misconduct" and "failure" on the part of some intermediate commanders to "recognize the seriousness of the situation."

He added that the officers in charge also neglected to direct a complete investigation of brutality complaints and to take "prompt corrective and punitive action as required."

As a result, McNarney said he has directed his inspector general to undertake the review of all phases of the trials as they occurred from June, 1944 to the present time. The inspector general also was ordered to "closely observe" the continuance of the trials with the aid of a special staff.

WASHINGTON, May 14—Sen. Kenneth S. Wherry, R., Neb., said today he has been informed by a high-ranking state department official that at least 12 department employees have been discharged for left wing sympathies.

Wherry's statement came as a senate appropriations subcommittee was asked to postpone action on suggestions by several of its members for a sweeping examination of state department employees. The members believe that further opportunity should be afforded the department "to set its own house in order."

WASHINGTON, May 14—President Truman has asked the Army and Navy to agree on a unification plan for the armed forces by May 31, the White House disclosed today.

'PREMIUM PAY' FOR HOUSING IS GIVEN APPROVAL

WASHINGTON, May 14—Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt, armed with what he called "basic tools," today looked toward his goal of 2,700,000 homes for veterans with a warning no miracles should be expected.

Wyatt won the right to make "premium payments" for extra production of scarce building materials yesterday after long debate by house members who, finally, gave him $400,000,000 of the $600,000,000 he sought for the subsidies.

The amended housing bill, which also includes the right to guarantee a market for prefabricated houses, went to the senate for concurrence and was promptly approved and sent to the White House. The President's signature was assured.

LONDON, May 14—The Moscow radio renewed its attacks on American forces in Iceland today, claiming that the island republic never could be entirely independent while they remained.

"The United States continues to insist that it be granted long term military bases," a Moscow broadcast in English said.

The commentator said the United States had ignored Iceland's repeated representations that the forces be withdrawn in accordance with a treaty obligation. He recalled a recent statement by Premier Olafur Thors that Iceland could not grant the American request for postwar bases.

crease the world's food supply but merely would "distribute scarcity."

5. The agriculture department said its grain bonus plan—on which it had pinned its hopes of drawing 113,000,000 bushels of export wheat off U. S. farms—had yielded only 23,447,986 bushels of export wheat and 31,783,311 bushels of corn through May 9.

Mr. Hoover issued one of the grimmest famine warnings yet last night when he told the American Agriculture Editors' association that 800,000,000 people would face death if the flow of food overseas were cut off. He said 800,000,000 people faced hunger.

He said he still was confident the threat could be met through voluntary methods, however, if the farmer turned in his grain under the bonus program, the housewife conserved every possible bit of food, and food in trade channels was controlled.

Mr. Hoover said the situation was much worse than after the shorter World War I. After that conflict, he said, exporting nations were able to mobilize 27,000,000 tons of food within a year.

major cities as a result of the coal shortage, remained in effect, as did the 25 per cent cut in railroad passenger service. A freight embargo was lifted however, along with a second cut in passenger train service scheduled for tomorrow.

Hopes for reaching an agreement before the May 25 expiration of the truce rose after soft coal operators agreed to pay $3,000,000 for disputed overtime in the first major break since negotiations began in mid-March. There appeared little prospect, however, that a contract could be completed by the Wednesday deadline set by President Truman.

After winning the back pay settlement, Lewis followed up last night with a demand for a $70,000,000-a-year levy on the industry to finance a miners' welfare fund.

The proposal, a switch from his demand for a coal tonnage royalty to support the fund, called for a seven per cent assessment on mine payrolls to cover costs of the fund. Operators had no immediate comment.

Meanwhile, the threat of a nationwide railroad strike Saturday, involving 300,000 workers, remain in effect, and a union spokesman said no effort had been made to resume negotiations since they were broken off in Chicago May 2.

President Truman told his press conference last week that he would not hesitate to seize the lines, but there was no indication that government operation would avert the strike.

TWO QUARANTINED

Two Jackson township children Tuesday were under scarlet fever quarantine ordered by Dr. A. D. Blackburn, Pickaway county health commissioner. They are Edward G. Crites, six, son of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Crites; and Nancy Wardell, nine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wardell.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Marriage license was issued Monday from Pickaway County probate court to Frank Mettler Cross, 25, student, Route 1, Renfrew, Pa., and Betty Jane Stewart, nurse, New Holland. An application for a marriage license was filed by Frederick Eugene Palm, 24, farmer, 924 South Court street, and Beatrice Adams, Route 2, Williamsport.

velopment division on the general staff level will be placed under the chief of staff. One high-ranking officer said the Army doesn't want to be caught napping in an age when guided missiles with atomic warheads are operated by remote control.

"The application of scientific advances to military equipment, training and operations will be the subject of continuous study and experimentation throughout the Army," the war department said.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army chief of staff, will have his powers broadened so that he is placed in over-all command of all Army field forces.

Gen. Carl Spaatz, chief of the Army Air Forces, will gain increased autonomy for his forces under the reorganization. His authority is to be increased with respect to AAF administrative, operational, research, procurement and budgetary activities. Air will receive increased representation on the war department general staff.

The reorganization abolishes the old nine service commands and divides the nation into six Army areas commanded by Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commanding general of the Army ground forces.

An Army spokesman said the realignment of commands will reduce the number of personnel needed for administrative work and generally streamline procedures. More power to make policy decisions of a local nature will be turned over to Army commanders.

In the war department itself, the heads of the general staff divisions will be designated henceforth as directors instead of assistant chiefs of staff. The designations G-1, G-2, G-3, etc. are to be abolished.

The war department said authority to conduct operations remains with the major commands. But the staff directors here will plan, direct and coordinate the activities of the operating services.

The functions now performed by the headquarters of the Army service forces are to be redistributed among the general and special staff divisions, the major commands and technical services. The ASF is abolished.

ATOMIC ENERGY IS TOPIC FOR KIWANIS CLUB

Some of the mysteries of atomic energy were discussed by Dan Ridenour, Lancaster, at the Kiwanis Club meeting Monday evening in Hanley's.

Mr. Ridenour stated the discovery of atomic energy, or nuclear energy as it should rightly be called, has been compared by scientists with the discovery of the wheel. He stated that one pound of uranium, the element from which atomic power has been obtained, could generate 11,400,000 kilowatt hours of energy.

Uses of atomic energy in peacetime are still indefinite, the speaker said. He pointed to the tremendous cost of the danger from the tremendous heat generated. He said a pound of uranium could produce the same amount of energy made by 1600 tons of coal or 2,000,000 gallons of gasoline.

Future uses envisioned by scientists include those where tremendous amounts of heat are needed. He said the temperature of the exploding atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki was estimated at 3,000,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

The speaker warned that since the atom had been cracked and atomic bombs developed there was danger from unscrupulous persons who might develop weapons to wipe out great sections of the earth.

Mr. Ridenour was introduced by A. W. Bosworth.

TRAFFIC, GAME OFFENSES DRAW FINES FOR SOX

Fines were imposed on six persons Monday by Justice of the Peace Harold O. Eveland as a result of weekend motoring and fishing offenses.

Cecil Hardy, Kingston, was penalized $100 and $9.95 costs for reckless driving; Hardy had been arrested by State Highway Patrolman Charles W. Scott.

Carl Heston, Columbus, was fined $25 and $6 costs for operating a truck and trailer with no license plate on the trailer. He had been taken into custody of State Highway Patrolman L. G. Ridenour.

James B. Smith, Columbus, was penalized $25 plus $6.20 costs for reckless driving. He had been arrested by Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff.

Vance Corner, Blufffield, W. Va., was fined $15 and $5.95 costs for non-possession of a non-resident fishing license. He had been arrested while fishing in Walnut creek by Fish and Game Protector Clarence Francis.

George DeLong, Ashville, was penalized $15 plus $5.95 costs for fishing in Walnut creek with more than three hooks on his line. The arrest was made by Fish and Game Protector Francis.

Archie DeLong, Ashville, brother of George DeLong, was fined $15 and $5.95 costs for fishing in Walnut creek without a license. He had been taken into custody by Fish and Game Protector Chalmers Burns.

WOMAN DRIVER FINED

Juanita Carpenter, 23, of 653 East Mound street, was remanded to the Pickaway county jail in default of $100 fine and costs imposed Monday by Mayor Ben H. Gordon for operating an automobile without possessing a driver's license. The records show it was her second offense. She was arrested by police at Main and Court streets.

3 SENTENCED TO MANSFIELD; SIX ON PROBATION

Mansfield was meted out to Henry Wilkes, 23, of 147 Logan street, on each of two charges of forgery to which he had pleaded guilty. Judge Crist stipulated that the sentences are to run concurrently.

Hill To Mansfield

William Hill, 25, Haywood avenue, was sentenced to one to five years in Mansfield for the daylight burglary of the home of Earl Ellingsworth at South Bloomfield. Hill had pleaded guilty to the charge but had entered a not guilty plea to a second indictment charging the night time burglary of the Ellingsworth home.

Those released on probation are: Frank Downing, 26, who had pleaded guilty to forgery, three years; Mrs. Doris Carter, 19, who had pleaded guilty to two forgery charges, three years; Carl Mace, 21, who had pleaded guilty to burglary of the Don White grocery, five years; Harold Eugene Reed, 22, who had pleaded guilty to burglary of the Don White grocery, three years; Raymond Congrove, 19, farmer, Route 1, Kingston, who had pleaded guilty to forgery, three years; Allen Trego, 53, who had pleaded guilty of assault and battery on Minnie Trego, six months; and Charles F. Shade, 52, who had pleaded guilty of non-support of seven minor children, five years.

Counsel Appointed

Attorney Joseph W. Adkins, Jr. was appointed counsel for Fred Steinbrugge, 55, indigent, who pleaded not guilty Monday to forgery. Bond was set at $1,000 and trial scheduled for May 20.

Attorney Paul E. Adkins was named counsel for Benjamin Schwalbach, 24, indigent, who pleaded not guilty Monday to non-support of two minor children. Bond was set at $500 and trial scheduled for May 27.

Judge Crist ordered that Bert Ison, who Monday pleaded guilty of non-support of three minor children, to post $1,000 to insure such support or face sentence.

War Game Is Fatal To Youth, 15

after Graveline and Felix left the hunting camp to look for game and Smith and Helm walked off in another direction.

The two parties were about 200 yards apart when, Smith related, Graveline fired a shot in his and Helm's direction, barely missing Helm. Helm fired back, and five minutes of mock war followed. The boys said they exchanged about 25 rifle and shotgun shots "in the general direction" of each other.

During the battle the boys said they saw Graveline "duck" behind a bush.

Felix said he ended the shooting by shouting "I surrender," then started for camp, calling, "come on, Cecil, let's go back."

He walked off without Graveline, however, he said. An hour later they started looking for him. An inquest will be held today.

tinues to feed the same terrific amount of grain to his livestock, we won't be able to meet foreign commitments."

He said trade reports indicated this wheat-flour-bread outlook:

Housewives—Probably have more wheat than normal on their kitchen shelves; reports indicate some hoarding; many bought 50-lb sacks in March and early April.

Flour retailers—On the average probably have a 12-15 day supply.

Wholesalers—Eight to 10 day supply generally.

Millers—Shutting down generally because of lack of wheat.

Farmers—Crop two weeks ahead of time being harvested already in some parts of Texas. Government's emergency bonus of 30 cents a bushel for export wheat doesn't apply to new crop. Farmer with early harvests may hold onto grain as long as possible hoping for another price increase in addition to yesterday's 15 cent boost. He'll have to sell when the big harvest comes in, however, as he doesn't have storage space to hold it.

Funeral services for Mrs. Bertha F. Egan, 68, who died early Monday, will be conducted at 2 p. m. Wednesday in the residence at Laurelville, with the Rev. C. L. Thomas officiating. Burial will be in Green Summit cemetery under direction of the Defenbaugh funeral home, Circleville. The body will remain in the Laurelville residence where friends may call.

The extension itself was voted, 280 to 84.

Congressional failure to extend the selective service act would end not only drafting, but also:

1. The Smith-Connally act—this amendment to the draft law authorizes governmental seizure of vital strike-bound plants or mines. Congressmen dispute whether President Truman, for instance, would have power to take over the coal mines even without the Smith-Connally law.

2. Veterans re-employment rights—The draft law provides that any veteran is entitled to a job comparable to the one he held before entering the service if he applies for it within 90 days after discharge.

3. Forcible detention of conscientious objectors—selective service officials say 8,000 objectors now held in camps must be freed at midnight unless the draft law is extended.

creased from 113,000 tons in 1944 to 208,000 tons in 1945 as acreage and yield per acre both increased, the service said. The price per ton received by growers was somewhat lower but the total value was about 78 percent larger.
A near record for May 1 was set in milk production in the Ohio crop reporters' herds. They averaged 18.7 pounds, more than two pounds above the 1935-44 average for May 1.
Egg production on Ohio farms during April was estimated at 317,000,000 eggs, seasonally higher than in March but below the April, 1945, total. A larger proportion of higher-cost sexed pullets were purchased this year than last. Turkey poulters averaged slightly higher this year, the service said.

'War Game' Is Fatal To Youth, 15

after Graveline and Felix left the hunting camp to look for game and Smith and Helm walked off in another direction.
The two parties were about 200 yards apart when, Smith related, Graveline fired a shot in his and Helm's direction, barely missing Helm. Helm fired back, and five minutes of mock war followed. The boys said they exchanged about 25 rifle and shotgun shots "in the general direction" of each other.
During the battle the boys said they saw Graveline "duck" behind a bush.
Felix said he ended the shooting by shouting "I surrender," then started for camp, calling, "come on, Cecil, let's go back."
He walked off without Graveline, however, he said. An hour later they started looking for him. An inquest will be held today.

The extension itself was voted, 280 to 84.
Congressional failure to extend the selective service act would end not only drafting, but also:
1. The Smith-Connally act—this amendment to the draft law authorizes governmental seizure of vital strike-bound plants or mines. Congressmen dispute whether President Truman, for instance, would have power to take over the coal mines even without the Smith-Connally law.
2. Veterans re-employment rights—The draft law provides that any veteran is entitled to a job comparable to the one he held before entering the service if he applies for it within 90 days after discharge.
3. Forcible detention of conscientious objectors—selective service officials say 8,000 objectors now held in camps must be freed at midnight unless the draft law is extended.

Long Bread Shortage Predicted By Miller

tinue to feed the same terrific amount of grain to his livestock, we won't be able to meet foreign commitments."
He said trade reports indicated this wheat-flour-bread outlook:
Housewives—Probably have more wheat than normal on their kitchen shelves; reports indicate some hoarding; many bought 50-lb sacks in March and early April.
Flour retailers—On the average probably have a 12-15 day supply. Wholesalers—Eight to 10 day supply generally.
Millers—Shutting down generally because of lack of wheat.
Farmers—Crop two weeks ahead of time being harvested already in some parts of Texas. Government's emergency bonus of 30 cents a bushel for export wheat doesn't apply to new crop. Farmer with early harvests may hold onto grain as long as possible hoping for another price increase in addition to yesterday's 15 cent boost. He'll have to sell when the big harvest comes in, however, as he doesn't have storage space to hold it.

EAGLES 9 TAKES FIRST PLACE IN NIGHT LEAGUE

Williamsport Has Close Call In First Start, Edging Esmeralda Team

Rain washed out Tuesday's Night Softball league program but two interesting contests were played Monday night before the rain fell.

Eagles won their second game of the season Monday night, knocking Isaly's out of first place with a 4-3 setback. Williamsport Red and White finally got its first game played, and scored a 5-4 win over Esmeralda.

Shortly after the games were played rain fell and continued during the night and Tuesday morning making the field too wet for more games until the sun dried it. President Don Henkle said Wednesday's regular Richards and Blue Ribbon game would be played, if weather permits.

In the first game only one run was scored until the seventh inning when both teams started scoring. In the fifth the Red and White scored a run on Morrison's homer, the second hit off Smith. In the top of the seventh two errors, a hit batsman, two walks, a wild pitch and two hits netted Williamsport four runs.

In the last half of the inning Esmeralda broke loose with five hits after getting none off George during the first six innings. T. Byrd's triple was the first blow off George and it brought home L. A. Hill who had walked. Four singles and an error followed to let in four runs, just one short of tying the score.

McKinney's fast ball was too much for Isaly's. He struck out 16 and allowed only four singles. Eagles' hitters collected seven, including doubles by Watson and Whaley, off D. Wellington. He struck out 7.

Eagles scored twice in the first frame on Watson's double, two hit batsmen and two walks. In the second Isaly's got a run on a single and two stolen bases. A walk, error and infield out gave Eagles a run in the third, but Isaly's tied the score at 3-3 with two runs on three hits, two stolen bases and a wild pitch.

Eagles won in the last of the seventh when S. Denny singled, advanced on a walk and came home on R. Denny's hit.

BIRDS OUT OF CELLAR; AA HAS MANY CHANGES

By United Press
Louisville's lead in the American Association league was cut to half a game today while all other teams changed places as results of games played last night.

Virgil Abernathy hurled a 3-0 shutout for the Minneapolis Millers at Louisville. The victory moved the Millers from sixth to fifth place and cut the Colonel's slim lead.

Toledo took second place away from St. Paul by a 3-1 victory over Kansas City, while the Saints, defeated by Indianapolis, 5-4, fell into fourth. The Indians moved up to third place. Columbus got out of the cellar by nudging Milwaukee, 6-5, putting the Brewers in last place.

Fourteen hits, including a homer by Philley, netted only five runs for the Milwaukee Brewers. The Brews led Columbus 5 to 3 going into the last half of the eighth when Columbus took the lead with a three run rally. Wayne McLeland pitched for the Red Birds, with Charlie Root taking over in the ninth. Ewald Pyle held the Birds in check until the eighth when he was relieved by Wendell Davis.

DODGER 'SHIFT' IS PAYING OFF

'Bums' Stretch Lead Over National Teams; Indians And Browns Split

NEW YORK, May 14—Baseball's version of the Notre Dame shift may not win a pennant for the Brooklyn Dodgers, but nevertheless the Flatbush dandies were in first place today after a series of player changes that has left fans, opponents and especially the official scorers dizzy.

At Ebbets Field they call it the startling lineup because almost always there is a surprise in it. And Manager Leonidas Ernest Durocher, who admits there may be some connection with his middle name and the way he runs the Dodgers, says he isn't through making changes. There are youngsters on the Dodger bench who haven't had a fair chance yet, he says, and there are oldsters ready to step in if the kids in Branch Rickey's celebrated "youth movement" fail to click.

Up to now Durocher has used seven different outfielders, four first basemen, three second basemen, three third basemen and three catchers. Only Harold (Pee-wee) Reese at shortstop had started in every game, but that's no surprise because the flashy St. Louis youngster the Dodgers picked up in the Cardinals' back-yard is Durocher's nominee as the best player at his position in either league.

Whatever combination takes the field gives the fans a show. The Dodgers won their ninth straight home game, 6 to 3 over the Phils yesterday and were behind, 3 to 2 in the fifth when Pete Reiser came home on a triple steal. It was the second triple theft in three days and it so unnerved the Phils that they yielded three more runs in the next inning when pitcher Oscar Judd quit from sheer exhaustion. His successor, Dick M.oney, got rattled and threw a ball into the face of Shortstop John O'Neill trying to catch a runner. The runner was safe and O'Neill left the game with three loosened teeth. Rookie Robert Ramazzotti got his first start at third base and contributed a walk and a double to the nine-hit attack. The Phils got 13 hits off Ed Head including a homer by Frank McCormick.

Four runs in the ninth, the last two of which came in on an error by relief pitcher Mike Budnick gave the Braves a 7 to 6 win over the Giants at Boston. Ray Sanders paced Boston with three singles while major league leader Johnny Mize and Jack Graham got homers for the Giants. It was the seventh for Mize.

In the American, the Tigers beat Chicago, 6 to 5 at Detroit, scoring all their runs on six walks, a safe bunt, and an error in the second. Lefty Hal Newhouse won his fifth game, although he needed relief help.

The Browns and Indians split at Cleveland. Charley (Red) Embree pitched the Indians to a 9 to 2 victory after which lefty Al Milnar gave St. Louis a six-hit, 3 to 0 blanking. Milnar, an Indian cast-off, gained his first 1946 victory. Embree also won hitting honors in the opener with a three-run double that sparked a six run second inning rally. Even a triple play failed to save the Indians in the after-piece. Chuck Stevens started it when he lined to pitcher Joe Joe Krauskas. A snap throw got base-runner Johnny Berardino at second and the relay caught Mark Christman at first.

DODGER 'SHIFT' IS PAYING OFF

'Bums' Stretch Lead Over National Teams; Indians And Browns Split

NEW YORK, May 14—Baseball's version of the Notre Dame shift may not win a pennant for the Brooklyn Dodgers, but nevertheless the Flatbush dandies were in first place today after a series of player changes that has left fans, opponents and especially the official scorers dizzy.

At Ebbets Field they call it the startling lineup because almost always there is a surprise in it. And Manager Leonidas Ernest Durocher, who admits there may be some connection with his middle name and the way he runs the Dodgers, says he isn't through making changes. There are youngsters on the Dodger bench who haven't had a fair chance yet, he says, and there are oldsters ready to step in if the kids in Branch Rickey's celebrated "youth movement" fail to click.

Up to now Durocher has used seven different outfielders, four first basemen, three second basemen, three third basemen and three catchers. Only Harold (Pee-wee) Reese at shortstop had started in every game, but that's no surprise because the flashy St. Louis youngster the Dodgers picked up in the Cardinals' back-yard is Durocher's nominee as the best player at his position in either league.

Whatever combination takes the field gives the fans a show. The Dodgers won their ninth straight home game, 6 to 3 over the Phils yesterday and were behind, 3 to 2 in the fifth when Pete Reiser came home on a triple steal. It was the second triple theft in three days and it so unnerved the Phils that they yielded three more runs in the next inning when pitcher Oscar Judd quit from sheer exhaustion. His successor, Dick M.oney, got rattled and threw a ball into the face of Shortstop John O'Neill trying to catch a runner. The runner was safe and O'Neill left the game with three loosened teeth. Rookie Robert Ramazotti got his first start at third base and contributed a walk and a double to the nine-hit attack. The Phils got 13 hits off Ed Head including a homer by Frank McCormick.

Four runs in the ninth, the last two of which came in on an error by relief pitcher Mike Budnick gave the Braves a 7 to 6 win over the Giants at Boston. Ray Sanders paced Boston with three singles while major league leader Johnny Mize and Jack Graham got homers for the Giants. It was the seventh for Mize.

In the American, the Tigers beat Chicago, 6 to 5 at Detroit, scoring all their runs on six walks, a safe bunt, and an error in the second. Lefty Hal Newhouse won his fifth game, although he needed relief help.

The Browns and Indians split at Cleveland. Charley (Red) Embree pitched the Indians to a 9 to 2 victory after which lefty Al Milnar gave St. Louis a six-hit, 8 to 0 blanking. Milnar, an Indian cast-off, gained his first 1946 victory. Embree also won hitting honors in the opener with a three-run double that sparked a six run second inning rally. Even a triple play failed to save the Indians in the after-piece. Chuck Stevens started it when he lined to pitcher Joe Krauskas. A snap throw got base-runner Johnny Berardino at second and the relay caught Mark Christman at first.

NO DISTAFF STRIKE

HE came to wash woodwork during spring house cleaning. He stayed to help spade the vegetable garden, put up screens and mend the leak in the porch roof. He was the laundress's husband, tall, rather thin, solemn. He had never quite recovered from a long layoff during the depression. Then he got a good job during the war years—until six weeks ago when a strike hit the plant.

At first he was sympathetic to his union's campaign for more pay. He could well use more. But the strike dragged on. There was no pay at all. Odd jobs helped him and his family to eat. His union heard about the jobs, and required ten per cent of the earnings to go to the union's unemployment fund. The other three men who had worked at the bench with him were spending the strike time fishing. He liked to fish, too, preferred it to spading, washing paint or putting up screens.

The strike was settled. He worked five days and the plant was closed. No coal to fire the boilers. Housecleaning done now, gardens dug, screens up.

He might as well go fishing, too. Food for the family? Rent? His wife went out four days a week instead of one, to wash and iron.

There's probably a whole social and economic philosophy in this if a fellow could figure out what it means.

NEW CHAPTER IN HISTORY

THE Roman empire traded with far-off Indo-China. So Dr. Olov R. T. Janse, head of a Harvard archaeological expedition to Indo-China, told the recent convention of the American Oriental Society. Till now the vast stretches of Asia had been thought to cut off the civilization of Europe at a point not much east of Persia. The one exception was the purchase of Chinese silk, but this passed through many middlemen; and Chinese sellers and Roman buyers never met. Or so it has been generally believed.

Now discoveries of Roman medals, struck by second century emperors, and beads of Roman make are reported; also glass, pottery and metalwork—all found on the edge of the Pacific.

Evidently it was as true 1,800 years ago as now that "It's a small world after all."

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 14—Continuing the outline of Communist techniques from my previous column:

Communists greatly favor demonstrations. It is not difficult for a cell of a dozen CP members to organize a demonstration, as for instance the recent pre-election riot against the Japanese premier, and some recent New York union demonstrations against Churchill, and on political subjects. Enough people with grievances can be found to demonstrate for practically any well-sounding cause, if enthusiasts round them up. Americans use such means only when thoroughly aroused. CP uses the technique as a matter of custom. Newspapers covering mobs and demonstrations should ascertain and report the identity not only of the leaders but of participants in demonstrations. Police also should get names and addresses, and pass these along to F. B. I. through usual channels.

Basic idea of CP seems to be—Russia first. Thus communist influence groups agitated energetically to "bring the boys home" from Europe. They took the leadership in a movement which was fondly wanted by American mothers. But Russia did not bring her own boys home. In France, CP ousted DeGaulle to cut the size of the French defending army; but the Russian army remains as large as ever. This is a typical illustration of CP working internationally.

CP line now is irreconcilable to labor-management peace. During the war it favored cooperation between unions and management to get production, although earlier, before Russia was invaded, it had the same policy as now. It also favors inter-union conflict over jurisdictional disputes. Two important labor strikes in New York during the past few months, are attributed solely to the desire of a Communist-influenced union to break and gain control of a parallel or adjacent union in a related industry.

One distinction may be noted between Communist strikes and regular union strikes. The communist strike generally seeks political benefits. (Crusades for political issues or Capitalist sabotage), while the union strikes are primarily concerned with wages and working conditions, and a desire to improve them. If wages are not the reason for a strike, look for CP somewhere in the background.

The swift changes in CP line can be read in the Daily Worker, the communist newspaper in New York which now has a San Francisco edition. Recently the worker has been attacking Walter Reuther of the auto workers.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

UNCONSCIOUS OF DANGER

YOU NEVER heard of a real girl who didn't know when she was being squeezed—except at the bridge table. There are times, however, when a bridge squeeze play operates so early in the game that the victim is either totally unconscious of the danger or only vaguely senses it. This is especially so if the squeeze involves a choice of discards from among three different suits. The sufferer usually reckons then that he can toss off a card from some suit which his partner can protect, whereas it may be that any discard he picks will wreck his hand.

That was bidding of a kind you would not expect to hear if this hand got played a dozen times in a big duplicate. More gradual bidding would have been so much more informative, however, that it would have landed a large number of expert bidders in an unsound slam—unsound because it depended on the location of the spade K and, even at that, required a most spectacular squeeze to make.

Here are the details reported by a player in Jeannette, near

Greensburg, Pa., who modestly refrained from giving his name. The heart 2 was led to the A, the club A and K were scored and a trick given up to the Q. South returned the heart 6 to the K, whereupon East reached his own hand by ruffing the heart 3 with the club 7. Then the club 10 was laid down to take out South's last trump. That was only the seventh trick, but it squeezed North in all three other suits.

Having discarded the spade 8 on the third club, North was reduced to three spades, the heart Q and the three diamonds, and the dummy retained two spades, the heart 10 and four diamonds, while East held three spades, the diamond J-8 and club 10-8. The diamond 5 was thrown from the dummy. North felt he had to keep his heart Q and three diamonds, so discarded one of his spades. East then finessed the spade Q and scored the A, also the diamond A and K, ruffed the diamond 10 with his last trump, then scored the spade 5, which had been set up by North's discard on the seventh trick. Pretty, eh?

DIET AND HEALTH

Sources of Fat in Food

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WITH starvation facing many countries and food scarcities prevalent in all, it is important for the average person to understand more about nutrition. The housewife, particularly, on whom the duty of feeding the family rests, should learn to think of various foods not so much by their table names, but as vehicles of the food elements which the body must have for growth and health.

In this way when one particular food is not obtainable, the clever woman may be able to find another which will serve the same purpose. Meat, for instance, is important because it furnishes the complete protein which the body must have for the building of new tissue and the repair of worn-out cells.

Vegetable Proteins
Vegetable proteins are good as far as they go, but they are not complete. Supplemented by milk or eggs, however, they do very well in supplying the essential protein needs of the body.

Fats, too, have an important role to play. First of all, they supply energy, twice as much, weight for weight, as sugars, starches and proteins. They are also the carriers for certain of the vitamins which dissolve in them, vitamins A, D, E, and K.

There are, of course, a number of fats which are included in the usual diet such as the fats from milk in the form of butter, various vegetable fats, and the fat of meats and oils. According to Doctor Harry J. Deuel, Jr. of the University of Southern California, it is believed that certain types of fats cannot be manufactured in the body.

The only source of the type of material in these fats known as trilinolein is in food. Corn oil is especially rich in this substance, while butter may be largely lacking in it. Margarine, which is made in large part from the cotton seed, peanut, and soybean oils as well as from meat fats, would seem to be just as satisfactory in the human diet as is butter, according to Dr. Deuel. Such margarine as is employed is in practically all instances fortified with vitamin A.

Experiments have been carried out on rats, in which the animals were divided into two groups, one group receiving butter as the source of fat in the diet, while the other received the margarine. The growth of both groups of animals was about the same. The results of Dr. Deuel's experiments showed that corn oil, cotton seed, olive, peanut and soybean oils as well as margarine were all equally as effective in promoting growth as was butter, when all of the other essential elements of food were supplied to the animals.

Nutritional Value
The nutritional value of milk is not confined to the fat in it as some people often think. Milk supplies carbohydrates as well as proteins needed for building tissue and repairing worn-out tissue. It is an excellent source of such minerals as calcium or lime, and phosphorus, and it supplies large amounts of riboflavin or vitamin B-2.

It would appear from the experimental work which has been conducted that fats are interchangeable in the diet. So far as present day knowledge is concerned, no one fat seems to be essential. However, in order to improve the taste of food and to aid in furnishing enough calcium and heat units fats are important in nutrition.

CHAPTER FORTY-SIX

MY HAPPINESS was so immense, it either made me temporarily insane or brought out the latent family talent for acting in me, I don't know which. I only knew that something took possession of me and made me act a part from that moment on, starting with lifted eyebrows and an ironical smile at the staring Tonia that broke the silence between us.

"You would!" he sneered without a trace of the grim enunciation that was one of his great charms, and with a distinctly mid-western twang instead. "You would come back and poke your long nose into this!"

"And you would snitch Neal's keys from the foyer console and make silly threats over the phone in a badly-disguised voice," I parried his taunt coolly. "Or is this lovely twang the real you?"

His eyes flickered for a second. "You recognized my voice?" he asked uncertainly.

"Naturally I did," I lied calmly. "Why did you do it?"

"Do what?" he snapped back, without moving.

"Kill Margot Ingalls."

He laughed briefly. "You are cool. I wonder, do you think it'll save you?"

"Perhaps yes, and perhaps no," I told him conversationally. "But either way, I'm curious. I've been thinking so much of your murder I'd like to know why you killed Margot and the others, when you could have gotten the pearls—without violence."

He laughed again. "That's what YOU think. But you're wrong. I wouldn't have killed anyone if I could have avoided it, not even the Ingalls dame. All I wanted from her was money, and a few—nines alone in Neal's room. Well, I got the minutes—plenty of 'em—while she tried to use Kennard to make me jealous. But when she found me ripping that pillow she wouldn't let me go on and started screaming—till I had to shut her up. Wood-ford was the natural consequence, of course. I couldn't take the chance he'd suddenly blurt out he'd recognized me after all in the elevator. And Brenda—well—I knew she'd break down and blab if ever her precious David came back."

"And so you shot her, a few hours before Neal's opening. Posing as Mr. Armstrong and putting the gun in her hand to make it look like suicide," I reconstructed his last murder for him. "By the way, Leighton is back. Didn't you know?"

Apparently he didn't. Neal's exodus had deprived him of his best source of information. Anyway, he stiffened perceptibly and said blandly: "Oh? So I was just in time! Does he believe in her—er—suicide, or have you managed to convince your friends of the police it was murder?"

"I don't know or care," I shrugged. "But tell me, why does a Brazilian coffee king blackmail—and murder—women? Or ARE you a Brazilian, and a coffee king?"

"What do you think?" he sneered.

"I think you're a fake," I told him. "And I also think you're in quite a spot. Because you really are madly in love with Neal and would hate to be caught now, when you think she's going to marry you."

He stared at me out of narrowed eyes for a very long moment. "Bright girl!" he said at last.

If wages are not the reason for a strike, look for CP somewhere in the background.

The swift changes in CP line can be read in the Daily Worker, the communist newspaper in New York which now has a San Francisco edition. Recently the worker has been attacking Walter Reuther of the auto workers.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

UNCONSCIOUS OF DANGER

YOU NEVER heard of a real girl who didn't know when she was being squeezed—except at the bridge table. There are times, however, when a bridge squeeze operates so early in the game that the victim is either totally unconscious of the danger or only vaguely senses it. This is especially so if the squeeze involves a choice of discards from among three different suits. The sufferer usually reckons then that he can toss off a card from some suit which his partner can protect, whereas it may be that any discard he picks will wreck his hand.

That was bidding of a kind you would not expect to hear if this hand got played a dozen times in a big duplicate. More gradual bidding would have been so much more informative, however, that it would have landed a large number of expert bidders in an unsound slam—unsound because it depended on the location of the spade K and, even at that, required a most spectacular squeeze to make.

Here are the details reported by a player in Jeannette, near

Greensburg, Pa., who modestly refrained from giving his name. The heart 2 was led to the A, the club A and K were scored and a trick given up to the K, whereupon East reached his own hand by ruffing the heart 3 with the club 7. Then the club 10 was laid down to take out South's last trump. That was only the seventh trick, but it squeezed North in all three other suits.

Having discarded the spade 8 on the third club, North was reduced to three spades, the heart Q and the three diamonds, and the dummy retained two spades, the heart 10 and four diamonds, while East held three spades, the diamond J-8 and club 10-8. The diamond 5 was thrown from the dummy. North felt he had to keep his heart Q and three diamonds, so discarded one of his spades. East then finessed the spade Q and scored the A, also the diamond A and K, ruffed the diamond 10 with his last trump, then scored the spade 5, which had been set up by North's discard on the seventh trick. Pretty, eh?

DIET AND HEALTH

Sources of Fat in Food

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WITH starvation facing many countries and food scarcities prevalent in all, it is important for the average person to understand more about nutrition. The housewife, particularly, on whom the duty of feeding the family rests, should learn to think of various foods as vehicles of the food elements which the body must have for growth and health.

In this way when one particular food is not obtainable, the clever woman may be able to find another which will serve the same purpose. Meat, for instance, is important because it furnishes the complete protein which the body must have for the building of new tissue and the repair of worn-out cells.

Vegetable Proteins
Vegetable proteins are good as far as they go, but they are not complete. Supplemented by milk or eggs, however, they do very well in supplying the essential protein needs of the body.

Fats, too, have an important role to play. First of all, they supply energy, twice as much, weight for weight, as sugars, starches and proteins. They are also the carriers for certain of the vitamins which dissolve in them, vitamins A, D, E, and K.

There are, of course, a number of fats which are included in the usual diet such as the fats from milk in the form of butter, various vegetable fats, and the fat of meats and oils. According to Doctor Harry J. Deuel, Jr. of the University of Southern California, it is believed that certain types of fats cannot be manufactured in the body.

The only source of the type of material in these fats known as

trilinolein is in food. Corn oil is especially rich in this substance, while butter may be largely lacking in it. Margarine, which is made in large part from the cotton seed, peanut, and soybean oils as well as from meat fats, would seem to be just as satisfactory in the human diet as is butter, according to Dr. Deuel. Such margarine as is employed is in practically all instances fortified with vitamin A.

Experiments have been carried out on rats, in which the animals were divided into two groups, one group receiving butter as the source of fat in the diet, while the other received the margarine. The growth of both groups of animals was about the same. The results of Dr. Deuel's experiments showed that corn oil, cotton seed, olive, peanut and soybean oils as well as margarine were all equally as effective in promoting growth as was butter, when all of the other essential elements of food were supplied to the animals.

Nutritional Value

The nutritional value of milk is not confined to the fat in it as some people often think. Milk supplies carbohydrates as well as proteins needed for building tissue and repairing worn-out tissue. It is an excellent source of such minerals as calcium or lime, and phosphorus, and it supplies large amounts of riboflavin or vitamin B-2.

It would appear from the experimental work which has been conducted that fats are interchangeable in the diet. So far as present day knowledge is concerned, no one fat seems to be essential. However, in order to improve the taste of food and to aid in furnishing enough calcium and heat units fats are important in nutrition.

CHAPTER FORTY-SIX

MY HAPPINESS was so immense, it either made me temporarily insane or brought out the latent faculty for acting in me, I don't know which. I only know that something took possession of me and made me act a part from that moment on, starting with lifted eyebrows and an ironical smile at the staring Tonia that broke the silence between us.

"You would?" he sneered without a trace of the grimace that was one of his great charms, and with a distinctly mid-western twang instead. "You would come back and poke your long nose into this?"

"And you would snitch Neal's keys from the foyer console and make silly threats over the phone in a badly-disguised voice," I parried his taunt coolly. "Or is this lovely twang the real you?"

His eyes flickered for a second. "You recognized my voice?" he asked uncertainly.

"Naturally I did," I lied calmly. "Why did you do it?"

"Do what?" he snapped back, without moving.

"Kill Margot Ingalls." "You are cool. I wonder, do you think it'll save you?"

"Perhaps yes, and perhaps no," I told him conversationally. "But either way, I'm curious. I've been thinking so much of your murders I'd like to know why you killed Margot and the others, when you could have gotten the pearls—without violence."

He laughed again. "That's what YOU think. But you're wrong. I wouldn't have killed anyone if I could have avoided it, not even the Ingalls dame. All I wanted from her was money, and a few minutes alone in Neal's room. Well, I got the minutes—plenty of 'em—while she tried to use Kennard to make me jealous. But when she found me ripping that pillow she wouldn't let me go on and started screaming—till I had to shut her up. Woodford was the natural consequence, of course. I couldn't take the chance he'd suddenly blurt out he'd recognized me after all in the elevator. And Brenda—well—I knew she'd break down and blab if ever her precious David came back."

"And so you shot her, a few hours before Neal's opening. Posing as Mr. Armstrong and putting the gun in her hand to make it look like suicide," I reconstructed his last murder for him. "By the way, Leighton is back. Didn't you know?"

Apparently he didn't. Neal's exodus had deprived him of his best source of information. Anyway, he stiffened perceptibly and said blandly: "Oh? So I was just in time! Does he believe in her—er—suicide, or have you managed to convince your friends of the police it was murder?"

"I don't know or care," I shrugged. "But tell me, why does a Brazilian coffee king blackmail—and murder—women? Or ARE you a Brazilian, and a coffee king?"

"What do you think?" he sneered.

"I think you're a fake," I told him. "And I also think you're in quite a spot. Because you really are madly in love with Neal and would hate to be caught now, when you think she's going to marry you."

He stared at me out of narrowed eyes for a very long moment.

"Bright girl!" he said at last.

"You're darn right I am crazy about her—or you wouldn't still be standing here, gabbing. You simply aren't yet dead because you're my future sister-in-law."

The "something" in me made me throw the last vestige of caution to the winds, and I laughed out loud, right in his face.

"Sister-in-law?" I jeered between guffaws. "Sister-in-law like fun? So you didn't know, Neal's really had you fooled by wearing your ring! Why—she was married to Deane late Saturday night. They're just back from a week-end honeymoon."

He became rigid. "You're lying. It isn't true," he said in not much more than a whisper. "Neal couldn't throw herself away on that braying ass. She's my kind. Ruthless. Taking what she wants magnificently! One woman who'd never grovel and go soft. You're lying. Say you're lying!"

"I'm not lying. Neal and Deane were married last Saturday," I repeated calmly.

The huge satisfaction I felt in dealing him that blow must have shown on my face. The blood rushed up into his head. He ripped out an unprintable oath and leaped forward, his arms raised, his hands turned into long talons clawing for my throat.

I don't think the yell I let out for Charley Bywater would have saved me, if a voice hadn't said sharply at the same time, from somewhere back of me: "Hands off. I have you covered."

Hunt Berwick's voice.

Then all at once the place was full of policemen. They seemed to come from everywhere. The hall behind me, the bathroom, the closets.

Two of them had a short struggle with Tonia. It was ended by the dull thud of a blow followed by a groan. And the groan was followed by the click of handcuffs, and uniformed backs bending over a huddle of gray clothes on the floor.

That was all I saw. Someone put his arm around my waist and led me out of the room at that moment. I only knew it was Hunt when he said in a queerly choked tone: "You fool! You darned brave little idiot! Risking your life to get his confession!"

It was the last straw. Hunt calling me brave!

I flung my arms around him and started to cry, and to laugh, and to cry again.

"I'm not brave," I told him between sobs and screams of mirth. "But I am a fool—I thought it was you! Please forgive me, Hunt, but I thought it was you for almost a week! And, oh, I'm so glad you aren't a murderer! So glad!"

I don't remember much after that.

Only that I lay on the sofa before my fireplace, talking a blue streak and begging Hunt's forgiveness over and over again. And that he made me drink something and kept telling me: "It's all right, Jane. It's perfectly all right. No, I'm not angry. I have nothing to forgive you. Of course you thought it was I. That's what Barry and I wanted you to think."

The following Sunday Claire, Inspector Barry, Hunt and I were strolling along a wooded path in the Poconos, where I had been ever since the day of Tonia's arrest.

The inspector had spirited me away, as soon as it was dark, to a charming inn out there—officially closed for the season and belonging to distant cousins of his—aware that the entire police force of New York wouldn't be able to protect me from the press once the facts of the case were made public.

He'd also vetoed visitors, afraid they'd be trailed by reporters. And so I had spent the week alone. But not exactly lonely and certainly not unmindful, seeing he hadn't objected to telephone calls and I read every paper that mentioned our murders. Which meant every single sheet published in the metropolitan area and all the more important ones throughout the country.

The three murders—Brenda, thank heaven, was no longer called a suicide—had made such a sensation they'd almost crowded out the war news. And I, for no good reason I could see, had been their heroine.

My picture stared at me from every front page, and the stories that accompanied it called me a female Sherlock Holmes at the least, and hinted broadly that a great sleuthing talent like mine deserved professional recognition.

All of which made me feel extremely foolish. And was my face red when another article, under Hunt's picture, extolled his "self-sacrificing courage" in doing his country two important services concurrently by "lending his extraordinary brain to the New York police to help solve three baffling murders, and his body to the Army Medical Corps for the test of a new malaria cure?"

So that had been behind his mysterious trip! I should have known it! Should have remembered he'd said the day we met in Elmhurst, that he'd offered himself to the government as a guinea pig for the cure! Especially when he'd spoken of a "second job" and assured me Margot's murder had happened at a most inconvenient time—for him.

No wonder he'd fallen asleep on our drive home. And no wonder he'd been quiet and a little grouchy the night of Neal's opening. Most likely he'd felt a wreck . . .

... other man would have been flat on his back. That's what he'd meant when he said the "shot of adrenaline" he'd mentioned to Dr. Ross. The excitement of Brenda's murder had made the ductless gland that produced the stuff work overtime, and the greater supply of it had made him feel better, temporarily. Anyway, that's how I figured it in my medical ignorance.

I was so ashamed of myself I tried to get Hunt on the phone to apologize some more. But his number didn't answer, and later the same day Claire rang up and told me, among other things, that Hunt had been in the office to say he was going to Washington again—for more of what he'd been getting. Some "shot" or something—and would like to week-end at my hiding place on his way back.

Incidentally, the fruitless call to Hunt was the only one I made in the whole week. All the others were made to me.

Claire kept in constant touch, for business and personal reasons. Dita rang up daily, to say she felt fine and was basking in the reflected glory of my "heroism." Leighton called to tell me he was flying straight back to from where he'd come, and would never forget the kindness I'd shown his poor wife during her last days. Inspector Barry inquired if I was all right or needed police protection.

Back Of The Headlines ...By Louis F. Keemle

Soviet Russia and Great Britain have finished their shadow boxing over the Mediterranean and have begun to show their cards.

The clue to the real story behind this international game of wits lies in Russia's surprise move suggesting that she might be agreeable to placing Italy's former colonies under Italian trusteeship within the United Nations framework.

Viacheslav M. Molotov, Soviet foreign minister, in presenting the proposal to the Paris conference, made it seem that he was making a big concession to a "compromise" suggested by France.

Molotov thus made a strong bid for further support by the leftist group in French politics. At the same time, he attempted to take the wind out of the sails of British spokesmen who have been protesting Russia's supposed insistence on Soviet military bases in Africa.

This clever move is intended to counter the British argument that Russia is trying to "cut across the throat of the empire" in the eastern Mediterranean. At the same time, Molotov has not committed Russia to anything definite. He can reverse himself without embarrassment if the hidden conditions behind his proposal are not met.

What Molotov's conditions are have not been disclosed. They presumably include the surrender by Italy of Trieste and the surrounding territory to Russia's satellite, Yugoslavia. The British-American allies so far have given no sign that they will give Trieste to Yugoslavia under any circumstances.

Molotov therefore has put Russia on the record as offering what appears to be a reasonable compromise, only to find it rebuffed. The probability is that Russia never really expected to be granted African bases in the first place.

The Russian idea, attributed to the French, is that Libya and Eritrea should be placed again under Italian management, subject to UN control. That means Russia would have a continuing voice in the status of these vital territories. Italy, as a defeated nation, would be merely a puppet controller, having little influence in United Nations councils.

However, Italy's stature might grow once she has been admitted to the United Nations. Historically and culturally, Italy has long been an important factor in world affairs, and the signs are that Britain and the United States, at least, are eager to restore her to an honored place in the world family.

In case the Italian trusteeship does not work out entirely satisfactorily, Britain has an ace in the hole. She is reported to have stipulated that the trusteeship should be of limited duration, with the colonies having the right after a certain period—perhaps a decade—of deciding their future status by popular vote.

The result might well be a verdict for complete independence. In that case, Libya would become a new member of the Arab league, divided into the separate states of Cyrenaica in the east and Tripolitania in the west. Great Britain could make advantageous treaties of mutual protection with such states, similar to the military-economic agreement she has reached with Trans-Jordan and is seeking to obtain with Iraq and Egypt.

It is worth noting, as part of the complicated pattern, that the British foreign secretary, Ernest Bevin, already is reported to have made a stipulation about Cyrenaica, which is adjacent to Egypt and the Suez canal. It was pointed out that Britain had promised the Senusi tribesmen of Cyrenaica during the war that they would not be returned to Italian rule, and that Britain therefore had moral grounds for proposing a trusteeship of her own over that region.

ALTHOUGH there are excellent prospects for personal progress, happiness and pleasant relations in heart and home affairs, with gratifying and profitable expansion and fulfillments, including the consummation of most cherished hopes and wishes, yet there are indications that these should be zealously safeguarded.

There are signs of possible disagreements, friction, nervous tension, with trivial situations likely to prove a menace unless amicably and tactfully managed. Otherwise, there are hopes of financial gain and achieved ambitions, with promotion and favors from superiors. Mrs. Marion's Class In Tribute To Mother

Gifts Presented At Meeting In Church

The Methodist church dining room was beautifully decorated as a garden and a color scheme of pink, green and yellow was carried out when members of Mrs. Marion's Sunday school class entertained with their annual Mother and Daughter banquet Monday evening. Lace cloths were used on the tables where flowers were attractively placed in pink and white garden hats while long pink tapers in pink and green holders shed a pretty glow on the tables.

Favors of miniature garden hats were given to members of the class and the guests were presented with boxes of candy. The programs found at the places were tied with yellow, pink and green ribbons with the names of the guests and members of the class inscribed upon them.

Baskets of weigelia, pink floss and mock orange were strategically placed about the dining room. Dinner was served in this gayly decorated dining room following the invocation given by the Rev. C. L. Thomas.

Mrs. Walter Heine welcomed the guests and Mrs. H. W. Plum gave the response. The guests were introduced and Mrs. George Marion, teacher of the class for thirty-four years, gave a resume of the history of the class.

Gifts were presented to Mrs. Marion. Mrs. E. J. Schneider for having the youngest baby, Mrs. Noah Spangler, the eldest mother present, and Mrs. Emmitt Brown for being the youngest grandmother.

Following this ceremony the guests adjourned to the social room for the remainder of the program. Mrs. Frank Kline sang two solos, "Songs My Mother Taught Me" and "My Mom". She was accompanied by Miss Beatrice Sprague.

W. E. Hilyard, superintendent of the Sunday school, gave two readings accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Harriet Henness. Miss Beatrice Sprague and Mrs. Frank Kline gave a humorous musical skit. Mrs. H. Carter showed colored pictures of scenes around Circleville as the concluding number of the program.

Out-of-town guests present were Mrs. Kugelman, Portsmouth; Mrs. M. C. Johnson, Worthington; Mrs. Costlow, Ashville; Mrs. Graham, Derby; Mrs. Sprague, Newark; Mrs. Frank Wharton, Ashville; Mrs. Herman Carter, Williamsport; Mrs. T. D. Van Camp Sr., Williamsport; the Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Thomas, Ringgold.

Mrs. Emmitt Brown, Plain City, a charter member of the class and Mrs. Forrest Brown, Gallipolis, were former members of the class who were present.

Members of the decoration committee were Mrs. E. W. Hedges, Mrs. Bert Shimp, Mrs. Karl Johnson and Mrs. Boyce Parks. Mrs. John Magill and Mrs. Stanley Cline were in charge of the reservations for the affair.

Mrs. Harold Pontius, Mrs. William Leist and Miss Elizabeth Hilyard served as the food committee for the banquet.

HUMANE SOCIETY WORK OUTLINED AT JACKSON PTS

The May meeting of the Jackson Parent Teacher Society was held Monday evening in the school auditorium with about 75 members and guests present.

Mrs. Eliza Brooks, president, opened the meeting and Mrs. Paul Thompson played "Polonaise in A" as a piano solo. Following a brief business session the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Benjamin McCollister, program chairman, who presented Donna and Nancy Cline in four musical numbers. Donna played "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," and Nancy, "Plantation Melody." They offered as duets, "Chop Sticks" and "By the Fire Side."

Mrs. Brooks introduced Fred Clark who spoke briefly and in turn introduced M. M. McCullam who is assistant to Tom Justus of the Columbus Humane Society.

Mr. McCullam spoke briefly on the work of the society and told of the work in the different departments. He said in part, the children's department is considered the most important to them. In connection with the education department the humane society is bringing to the children of Ohio a program in sound movies depicting the work of the society.

After the program the members and guests were invited to the home economics room where refreshments were served by the faculty. The room was decorated with crepe paper streamers in the school colors and the tables were artistically arranged with bowls of Spring flowers in shades of pink and white with white candles in crystal holders.

This gathering marked the last meeting of the school year for the Parent Teacher Society.

Mother-Daughter Banquet Held By Von Bora Society

Mrs. Blanche Mutschman was guest speaker for the annual Mother and Daughter banquet of the Von Bora society of the Trinity Lutheran church held in the Parish house Monday evening.

Mrs. Mutschman served three years with the Woman's Army Corps as Staff Sergeant. She used as her subject "War Mothers Yesterday-Today-and Tomorrow."

One hundred and twenty-five members and guests were entertained at the banquet that preceded the program. Arrangements of multi colored flowers were used in the dining room and on the table streamers of pastel shades of crepe paper down the center of the white cloths with candles and napkins of the same shades completed the party appointments. Tiny candy baskets were the favors.

Mrs. Fritz Sieverts, toastmistress, welcomed the guests and Mrs. Gladden Troutman responded. A letter from Mrs. Clark Will, special service chairman of the Red Cross, was read appealing for help. The Red Cross is in need of volunteer workers for sewing and also in the Camp and Hospital Corps.

Miss Mary K. Morgan sang "Mother Love". She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Anna Schleyer. Miss Anne Snider offered, "Warsaw Concerto", as a piano solo.

"A Prayer for Mother on Mother's Day", a reading, was given by Miss Barbara Ann Sieverts. A trumpet and cornet duet, "Fame and Fortune" was played by Jimmy Bartholomew and Ruth Trout.

Mrs. Marion's Class In Tribute To Mother

Gifts Presented At Meeting In Church

The Methodist church dining room was beautifully decorated as garden and a color scheme of pink, green and yellow was carried out when members of Mrs. Marion's Sunday school class entertained with their annual Mother and Daughter banquet Monday evening. Lace cloths were used on the tables where flowers were attractively placed in pink and white garden hats while long pink tapers in pink and green holders shed a pretty glow on the tables.

Favors of miniature garden hats were given to members of the class and the guests were presented with boxes of candy. The programs found at the places were tied with yellow, pink and green ribbons with the names of the guests and members of the class inscribed upon them.

Baskets of weigelia, pink floss and mock orange were strategically placed about the dining room. Dinner was served in this gayly decorated dining room following the invocation given by the Rev. C. L. Thomas.

Mrs. Walter Heine welcomed the guests and Mrs. H. W. Plum gave the response. The guests were introduced and Mrs. George Marion, teacher of the class for thirty-four years, gave a resume of the history of the class.

Gifts were presented to Mrs. Marion. Mrs. E. J. Schneider for having the youngest baby, Mrs. Noah Spangler, the eldest mother present, and Mrs. Emmitt Brown for being the youngest grandmother.

Following this ceremony the guests adjourned to the social room for the remainder of the program. Mrs. Frank Kline sang two solos, "Songs My Mother Taught Me" and "My Mom". She was accompanied by Miss Beatrice Sprague.

W. E. Hilyard, superintendent of the Sunday school, gave two readings accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Harriet Hennessy. Miss Beatrice Sprague and Mrs. Frank Kline gave a humorous musical skit. Mrs. H. Carter showed colored pictures of scenes around Circleville as the concluding number of the program.

Out-of-town guests present were Mrs. Kugelman, Portsmouth; Mrs. M. C. Johnson, Worthington; Mrs. Costlow, Ashville; Mrs. Graham, Derby; Mrs. Sprague, Newark; Mrs. Frank Wharton, Ashville; Mrs. Herman Carter, Williamsport; Mrs. T. D. Van Camp Sr., Williamsport; the Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Thomas, Ringgold.

Mrs. Emmitt Brown, Plain City, a charter member of the class and Mrs. Forrest Brown, Gallipolis, were former members of the class who were present.

Members of the decoration committee were Mrs. E. W. Hedges, Mrs. Bert Shimp, Mrs. Karl Johnson and Mrs. Boyce Parks. Mrs. John Magill and Mrs. Stanley Cline were in charge of the reservations for the affair.

Mrs. Harold Pontius, Mrs. William Leist and Miss Elizabeth Hilyard served as the food committee for the banquet.

HUMANE SOCIETY WORK OUTLINED AT JACKSON PTS

The May meeting of the Jackson Parent Teacher Society was held Monday evening in the school auditorium with about 75 members and guests present.

Mrs. Eliza Brooks, president, opened the meeting and Mrs. Paul Thompson played "Polonaise in A" as a piano solo. Following a brief business session the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Benjamin McCollister, program chairman, who presented Donna and Nancy Cline in four musical numbers.

Donna played "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," and Nancy, "Plantation Melody." They offered as duets, "Chop Sticks" and "By the Fire Side."

Mrs. Brooks introduced Fred Clark who spoke briefly and in turn introduced M. M. McCullam who is assistant to Tom Justus of the Columbus Humane Society.

Mr. McCullam spoke briefly on the work of the society and told of the work in the different departments. He said in part, the children's department is considered the most important to them.

In connection with the education department the humane society is bringing to the children of Ohio a program in sound movies depicting the work of the society.

After the program the members and guests were invited to the home economics room where refreshments were served by the faculty. The room was decorated with crepe paper streamers in the school colors and the tables were artistically arranged with bowls of Spring flowers in shades of pink and white with white candles in crystal holders.

This gathering marked the last meeting of the school year for the Parent Teacher Society.

Mother-Daughter Banquet Held By Von Bora Society

Mrs. Blanche Motschman was guest speaker for the annual Mother and Daughter banquet of the Von Bora society of the Trinity Lutheran church held in the Parish house Monday evening.

Mrs. Motschman served three years with the Woman's Army Corps as Staff Sergeant. She used as her subject "War Mothers Yesterday-Today-and Tomorrow."

One hundred and twenty-five members and guests were entertained at the banquet that preceded the program. Arrangements of multi colored flowers were used in the dining room and on the table streamers of pastel shades of crepe paper down the center of the white cloths with candles and napkins of the same shades completed the party appointments. Tiny candy baskets were the favors.

Mrs. Fritz Sieverts, toastmistress, welcomed the guests and Mrs. Gladden Troutman responded. A letter from Mrs. Clark Will, special service chairman of the Red Cross, was read appealing for help. The Red Cross is in need of volunteer workers for sewing and also in the Camp and Hospital Corps.

Miss Mary K. Morgan sang "Mother Love". She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Anna Schleyer. Miss Anne Snider offered, "Warsaw Concerto", as a piano solo.

"A Prayer for Mother on Mother's Day", a reading, was given by Miss Barbara Ann Sieverts. A trumpet and cornet duet, "Fame and Fortune" was played by Jimmy Bartholomew and Ruth Troutman.

and so it goes. Everyday more of those hard-to-get items are popping up on Murphy's counters. Lots of times they're gone before we advertise 'em, so we'd advise you to come in often and keep an eye peeled on the bargain counters

HAROLD LLOYD'S TEAM WINNER IN ABC TOURNEY

BUFFALO, May 14—The largest and longest of all competitive sports events, the American Bowling Congress championships, ends its 62-day stand at the Buffalo armory today with former movie actor Harold Lloyd's Lio-Da-Mars team of Santa Monica, Cal., already assured of the five-man team title.

The Lio-Da-Mars were crowned officially last night after the last of 5,744 five-man teams from throughout the United States and Canada failed to touch their high score of 3,023.

It was the first time in the 43-year history of the event that a Pacific coast team had won the five-man event. The Californians put on their winning performance on May 7 to top the Milwaukee Heils, a team whose 2,995 total had led the meet for 37 days.

The Lio-Da-Mars received $1,500 in cash and five diamond-studded medals for their feat. The Heils drew $1,200 second money and the Ryan's cafe team of Rochester, N. Y., was awarded $1,000 for its third place total of 2,991.

GAMBLING CORPSE

A professional gambler whose death is desired by at least a dozen of his victims finds that his evil deeds have caught up with him, and decides that it is time to do a disappearing act, during "The Case Of The Gambling Corpse," to be investigated by "Nick Carter, Master Detective," Tuesday, (7 to 7:30 p. m., EST), over Mutual. Officials believe that he has been murdered, and with so many logical suspects, try vainly to pin a supposed killing on most of them. But Nick and his girl-friend Patsy sense that the gambler's disappearance is just a little too well timed and seek out a different solution.

SALUTE KENTUCKY

Tribute will be paid to the great men, great horses and great people of Kentucky, when the Bluegrass state receives the "salute of the week" on the Army Air Forces program, "This Is Your Country," Wednesday, (3:30 to 4 p. m., EST), over Mutual. Special mention will also be made to the frontier nursing service, which is still active in the Kentucky hills, and to the flight nurses whose headquarters are at Bowman Field, Louisville, Ky.

TUGBOAT ANNIE

"Tugboat Annie Sails Again," with Marjorie Main in the title role, when "This Is My Best" presents Norman Reilly Raine's story, in the broadcast Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. In the story, Annie, beached for some time as the result of a fracas with her old enemy, Capt. Bullwinkle, resumes command of the fleet of the Deep-Sea Towing and Salvage Company, and promptly wrecks her tug as the result of an argument with Bullwinkle. Threatened with being beached again, Annie saves the day in dramatic fashion.

Commissioner Says Education Important In Improving Health

DR. BLACKBURN OUTLINES WORK OF OFFICE HERE

Health Conditions In City And County Much Better Than In Many Areas

Education plays an important part in safeguarding health and preventing outbreaks of disease in Pickaway county it was declared Tuesday by Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner.

Dr. Blackburn emphasized the necessity for observing general rules of sanitation at all times.

All public buildings such as schools, etc., are regularly inspected by the health commissioner, Dr. Blackburn explained, and the drinking water is regularly tested for purity. Private wells in the county are also tested upon request and, if the water is found to be unsafe, instructions are given for purifying it to prevent re-contamination.

"Health education is accomplished in many ways," Dr. Blackburn said. "Health items in our city paper play a great part. The Circleville Herald has always been willing and glad to publish our articles on health. The editor will probably be surprised to know that our scrap book contains 32 health articles that have been printed in The Herald in the past nine years. I want to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for the hearty cooperation with this department."

"Health talks to civic groups is another way that health education is accomplished. All of the schools of the county have added 'Health and Education' to their curriculum. This education is carried by the children into the homes. The county nurse, in making her visits into the homes, also imparts health education in many ways. Thousands of copies of health literature have been distributed into the homes in the past nine years. While education is a slow process a great deal has been accomplished along this line."

"In speaking of Pickaway county I wish also to say a few words about health work in Circleville from the viewpoint of an observer. I think that the City Health Department should be complimented for the good work it is doing. They have followed the same general program as the County Health Department and have been especially successful in their immunization program."

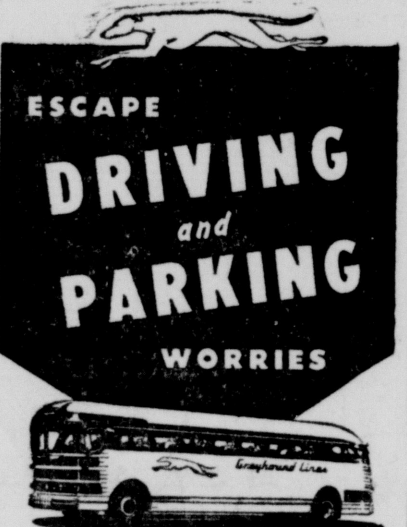

"The people of Circleville should be very thankful for the good health conditions that exist here. They are much better than conditions in some of the larger cities. We have pure water here, pasteurized milk, and clean, wholesome food establishments. Our restaurants are sanitary and clean. I have never heard of any sickness arising from any food that was served in any of our eating places. We have a hospital in Circleville that we should all be proud of. We have clean streets and more san-

CHILDREN START FIRE IN AUTO; DAMAGE SMALL

Five small children remained in an automobile, parked in West Franklin street near South Court street, Monday, while their parents were on a shopping tour.

One of the youngsters inserted a penny into a cigaret lighter in the car. There was some sputtering and a cloud of smoke. Passersby called firemen who reported there was no blaze and no damage—except to the lighter. Identity of the car's owner was not learned by firemen.

LOCAL BANKERS PLAN TO ATTEND COLUMBUS MEET

Several officials of Circleville banks were planning Tuesday to attend the 55th annual convention of the Ohio Bankers Association, which will be held Wednesday and Thursday at Columbus.

Among the chief topics scheduled for discussion are real estate prices, national and international finance, GI loans, and Ohio agriculture. The two-day convention will be the first such gathering since the annual schedule was interrupted by the war. The old-time pre-war banquet will be replaced by the informal dinner in keeping with current food conservation.

Commissioner Says Education Important In Improving Health

DR. BLACKBURN OUTLINES WORK OF OFFICE HERE

Health Conditions In City And County Much Better Than In Many Areas

Education plays an important part in safeguarding health and preventing outbreaks of disease in Pickaway county it was declared Tuesday by Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner.

Dr. Blackburn emphasized the necessity for observing general rules of sanitation at all times.

All public buildings such as schools, etc., are regularly inspected by the health commissioner. Dr. Blackburn explained, and the drinking water is regularly tested for purity. Private wells in the county are also tested upon request and, if the water is found to be unsafe, instructions are given for purifying it to prevent re-contamination.

"Health education is accomplished in many ways," Dr. Blackburn said. "Health items in our city paper play a great part. The Circleville Herald has always been willing and glad to publish our articles on health. The editor will probably be surprised to know that our scrap book contains 352 health articles that have been printed in The Herald in the past nine years. I want to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for the hearty cooperation with this department."

"Health talks to civic groups is another way that health education is accomplished. All of the schools of the county have added 'Health and Education' to their curriculum. This education is carried by the children into the homes. The county nurse, in making her visits into the homes, also imparts health education in many ways. Thousands of copies of health literature have been distributed into the homes in the past nine years. While education is a slow process a great deal has been accomplished along this line."

"In speaking of Pickaway county I wish also to say a few words about health work in Circleville from the viewpoint of an observer. I think that the City Health Department should be complimented for the good work it is doing. They have followed the same general program as the County Health Department and have been especially successful in their immunization program."

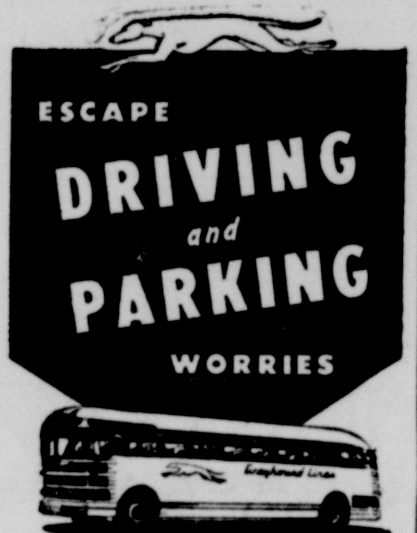

"The people of Circleville should be very thankful for the good health conditions that exist here. They are much better than conditions in some of the larger cities. We have pure water here, pasteurized milk, and clean, wholesome food establishments. Our restaurants are sanitary and clean. I have never heard of any sickness arising from any food that was served in any of our eating places. We have a hospital in Circleville that we should all be proud of. We have clean streets and more san-

Son Acquitted

OBVIOUS to surrounding on-lookers, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Turk embrace after leaving Queens county court in New York City, where their 14-year-old son, Jack, was acquitted of a first degree murder charge in the death of 3-year-old Sybil Gurfein. Young Turk will be arraigned in children's court as a juvenile delinquent, however, and he faces confinement in an institution until he is 21.

itary conditions here than in many cities that boast a sanitary officer. We have the best of doctors here and no one need go without medical attention. From a health standpoint Circleville and Pickaway county have much to be thankful for."

CHILDREN START FIRE IN AUTO; DAMAGE SMALL

Five small children remained in an automobile, parked in West Franklin street near South Court street, Monday, while their parents were on a shopping tour.

One of the youngsters inserted a penny into a cigaret lighter in the car. There was some sputtering and a cloud of smoke. Passersby called firemen who reported there was no blaze and no damage—except to the lighter. Identity of the car's owner was not learned by firemen.

LOCAL BANKERS PLAN TO ATTEND COLUMBUS MEET

Several officials of Circleville banks were planning Tuesday to attend the 55th annual convention of the Ohio Bankers Association, which will be held Wednesday and Thursday at Columbus.

Among the chief topics scheduled for discussion are real estate prices, national and international finance, GI loans, and Ohio agriculture. The two-day convention will be the first such gathering since the annual schedule was interrupted by the war. The old-time pre-war banquet will be replaced by the informal dinner in keeping with current food conservation.
